- I loved supplementing our activities with watching the Art 21 series. I liked the activities like the blind contour etc
- I got to learn how to see objects in a different way and how to trust my eyes without the nfluence of my mind. It was pretty cool
- Yes, I feel I learn a lot by writing my art making and art thinking in the process log required for the course. After one semester's continuous writing, I feel more comfortable to express my ideas and opinions. Once the thoughts are written down, I can see my progress better, which is very helpful to make the artwork.
- All of the drawing did in class were helpful ways to learn the relationship between lines and angles, and certainly improved our ablilty towards precise observation. The final self portrait project was especially interesting and useful.

- It was at times but otherwise, it was just getting through the assignments.
- Well I already kind of have the mindset of a painter, in relation to how I see the world and gush over the small things that make it so fantastic. So to come up with things to say over those aspects was not too challenging. Though formulating those thoughts were.
- This course requires the students to maintain high attention on either art making or the class discussion. Critical thinking skills are highly valued in this course.
- I think more drawings could be done in this class, since students could spent some time out of class to finish their drawings.

- I did everything I was asked to do but I thought there was a little too much to keep up with. I spent an enormous amount of time preparing for this class or doing assignments for this class. While I usually enjoyed all of this, I thought it was excessive.
- The only times when I didn't have much to say was when we were critiquing. I felt like who am I to judge someone else's creation? Art is so personal that no one else but the artist can understand it.

- Just great
- I love Professor Ruby's ART160 very much. I feel I got a lot from it! This is definitely a course that worth taking.
- Very interesting and useful, the fundimental aspects of drawing is very important for further development. I like how we are given the oppurtunity and time to learn ways to observe through drawing in this class.

- Very clear what was expected. Did a wonderful job for evaluations. Highly appreciated this.
- Very well prepared and beyond
- The syllabus is quite solid, but we do sometimes get extension for the projects if the professor agrees that we need more time to finish them.
- There were some confusions about the process log checking, several weeks after the class has started the class schedule railed off the schedule on the sylibus. So sometimes I'm not sure when to do the process log.

- Nell has a lot of enthusiasm and encouraged every student to think deeper about their work. She always had something to say about our pieces that helped us understand and make them look better. She new exactly what was making our pictures off.
- The comments gave to each student during the drawing process were extremly helpful, because even though the process of making mistakes and figuring them out by ourselves is important , a certain amount of guidance is necessary.

Projects were introduced in an inviting way that made me excited to come to class, and I enjoyed the relaxed environment, it allowed for relationships to form.
- When Nell put a calendar in front of me and said, "Phoebe, you need to have deadlines for yourself." That was helpful.

- While I have a history of working with 3D space in classes before it was great to be given the opportunity to solve a problem again. The planning involved in each of the project helped make them a reality. Too, creating an object that takes up space and can be used is extremely gratifying.
- Engaging with other students (not a typical independent study) and working along side Nell to create a fully formed and thought out piece was the goal. The process is the most difficult and rewarding aspect of any endeavor and I really felt it in this independent study.

- I loved learning and talking with everyone, the intimacy with the size of the class really made it easy to communicate with one another.

  I have a hard time with this box because I always felt behind and like I wasn't doing everything just right because I was taking time to stew and collect but now that I look back I was never like, "Screw this puppet thing," I was more like, "Ack! I just want these ideas out of my brain and onto that puppet stage."

- So sometimes I didn't meet deadlines or I showed up ten minutes late or wen to look at wood at Home Depot-- external lack of preparedness but I was always thinking and collecting and stewing on the ideas of lying, performance, pretending and puppetry.

- 1st day of class.
- Nell was extremely flexible and her willingness to adjust and talk to us openly about it made me feel comfortable about all the transitions as the semester went along.
- I'm not sure what you're asking. N. Ruby and I developed the syllabus as we went with the end goal of a performance piece.

- Always available during office hours and responded to emails quickly.
- Nell is always available and even when she happens to not be(which is never) she makes sure she makes time.
- N. Ruby went above and beyond the call of duty with this endeavor. She was not only a integral process in the formal elements of the construction of the puppet stage but also in the figurative/thought elements constructing a cohesive narrative with the ideas intact and tangible.

- Nell is great at talking to students one on one, if one gets a concept and the other doesn't she supports the one who does by letting them move forward independently, while staying back to further explain material for those who may be confused. It's a great learning environment and she never makes up feel intimidated.

- Always! And gives us great feedback on our progress, pushes when she sees us slacking(in the most creative ways possible :)) and pushes us to really search for meaning in what we are doing. I've learned so much about my self from her method of teaching and the respect she gives to each student.
- I never feel lesser than with Nell. She takes my ideas seriously and does not allow the formal qualities of the work escape my thinking.

Nell Ruby encourages self-directed work and goes out of her way to prepare students for grad school level performance. Very supportive and interested in what students have to say about the class and projects.
- No words suffice.
- Nell Ruby is rare: she knows her subject, it's elements, the intellectual and physical elements and terms and discussion SHE ALSO listens to students and accepts knew ideas with a critical and open eye.
- I go to Nell Ruby when I'm excited about something. That says a lot.

- Being given the space and independence to work as I please was WONDERFUL!!! For the past four years I have been working up to the point were I would be confident enough to step out on my own and Agnes and Nell have given me the tools to do such.

- The flexibility and trust were what made this class work. I didn't feel pressured to create a "product" (even if it's a product about process) on a regular class deadline, but was still "productive" every week. One week I would shoot 300 images, another week I would have meetings, another I would sit and think in my studio. Basically it was an adventure in what being "a real artist" is like.

  Also, having a studio space is essential. I will miss it dearly and am half-tempted to Occupy Dana.

- During my senior seminar I entered several upcoming exhibits. i was able to follow up effectively on the exhibits I was accepted into and work further on my portfolio.

- With the freedom to work on my own in between critiques was a challenge itself. It allowed me to grow in ways I never thought possible, including the rate of production I was able to achieve, and the amount of experimentation that resulted.
- Writing about your art is hard! But it seems like what I write organically works better than what happens when I'm trying to write about my art.

I enjoyed the location of my studio because I was able to have people pass through. This was how a lot of conversations started, which I really enjoyed.

- This was a self directed course based on the skills we learned in senior seminar. We were expected to work independently on our projects. We were encouraged to log our hours and report our progress during scheduled critique times.

  I'm not sure that we ever talked about this, but having had courses with Nell before I know how she evaluates.
- Also, the lack of concrete assignments (other than the website and senior show) was part of the charm. Again, the flexibility and trust, but supported with critiques, was what worked.
